THE MOSHER FAMILY.

The following data with reference to the Mosher Family, of which there are many connections in the county of Hants and other counties of the Province and Canada, will be read with interest. They have been carefully compiled by William Mosher, of Mosherville, Hants, after considerable research and trouble.

Ezeziel Mosher, the Ancestor of the Mosher Family in the United States and Canada.

EZEKIEL MOSHER lived in Manchester, England, according to the records, in the 17th century. Hugh Mosher, his son, came to Rhode Island with Lydia Maxon, his wife, in the 17th century; also, Daniel and family, and John, a bachelor, sons of the above Ezekiel. Daniel and family and John were massacred by Indians. The old man Ezekiel came out to Rhode Island soon after his sons, and died, leaving Hugh his only heir;

Hugh having one daughter and five sons, their names as follows :—Rebecca, John, James, Nicholas, Joseph and Daniel. Hugh, the son of Ezekiel, he being the second generation from Ezekiel, died in 1713.

THE THIRD GENERATION.

NICHOLAS, of Hugh, had ten children, their names being as follows :—Hugh, born November 16th, 1690 ; Joseph, born April 7th, 1692 ; Mercy, born December 16th, 1695 ; Elizabeth, born April 16th, 1697 ; Thomas, born February 26th, 1699 ; Nicholas, born January 1st, 1702 ; Mercy, born July 6th, 1705 ; Rebecca, born March 20th, 1707 ; Ephraim, born March 5th, 1709 ; Margaret, born January 17th, 1712. As will be seen there were two Mercys in the family ; the eldest died before the last was born. Joseph, son of Hugh, had eight children :—Rebecca, born December 28th, 1695 ; Philip, Jonathan, Joseph, James, Ruth, Benjamin and William, the latter, the youngest, born July 24th, 1713.

THE FOURTH GENERATION.

THE FIFTH GENERATION.

JAMES MOSHER, son of the above Nicholas, married Lydia Allen and had the following children :—Olive, who married Capt. Jehu Howland, in 1780, and did not come to Nova Scotia with the rest of the family. She died in Washington County, N. Y., March 19th, 1837. James and Lydia and some three or four of the children who were born at the date of their departure, 1760, came to Nova Scotia and landed at a creek on the Avon River, with several others from Rhode Island, and named the place Newport Landing. The Post Office at that place is still called Newport Landing, and the place re-named Avondale by the late inhabitants. James Mosher was one of the seventy proprietors who took up the Township of Newport, which comprised some twelve miles square, more or less. The family of the said James Mosher and Lydia comprised Amy, Sarah, Jehu, Barzillai, Lydia, Allen, Deliverance, Rhoda, Nicholas, Joseph, George and Elizabeth; the first four were born in Rhode Island, the remainder in the Township of Newport. James Mosher was a millwright, and built the first mill in the Township of Newport for grinding grain for the seventy proprietors, which was built where Alexander Cochran now has mills on the River Herbert. The mill was to be finished in October, 1761, but some accident happened and it was not finished until the fall of 1762. John Chambers was to attend the mill, and the agreement was to take a pint less out of the grain per bushel than the inhabitants outside of the Township. Also the proprietors were to be accommodated first, viz., two coming together, the proprietor would get his grist first.

THOMAS ALLEN, a brother of Mrs. James Mosher, came from Rhode Island when James and family emigrated to Nova Scotia. He was one of the seventy proprietors of the Township of Newport; also John Anthony, who married Ruth Allen, a sister of Mrs. James Mosher, but who was not one of the proprietors. He settled in Douglas, on the Kennetcook River, the first farm east of the Township line, and bounding on said line of Township between Newport and Douglas. Their family comprised Noah, Alice, Annie, James, David, and John. They left other children in Rhode Island. Noah Anthony married Agnes Harvie, a daughter of Amy Mosher and Archibald Harvie. Alice Anthony married Ezekiel Marsters; Annie Anthony married John Burgess, and lived on north side of Kennetcook River, near the mouth, now called Burlington. John Anthony and Ruth died and were buried on the farm, now called the Anthony burying-ground, where many of their friends lie to-day, 1891.

THE SIXTH GENERATION.

AMY MOSHER, of James and Lydia, married Archibald Harvie, and had John, Robert, Nicholas, Archibald, Barzillai, Agnes and Lydia. The last named married Archibald Harvie, who was blind of one eye, and went by the name of blind Arch.

SARAH MOSHER, of James and Lydia, married James Campbell, and had the following:—Gazelda, Archibald, Colin, Malcolm, John, Daniel, Dougall, Mary, Amy, Sarah, Lydia, Lucy, and Hannah.

JEHU MOSHER, of James and Lydia, married Hannah Greeno, and had Olive, Sarah, Lydia, Jehu, Daniel, James, Nicholas, Allen, Reuben, Matilda, Priscilla, and Hannah. In a short time Hannah Greeno died, and Jehu married Eleanor Foley, and she had Noah, Ark, Branch, Rachel,

Nelson, Sarah Freelove, William, Martha, George H., and Wesley. Jehu had a farm near where his father landed, and was quite a business man, and was very strong. It is said of him that he carried an anchor for a wager that weighed nearly 500 pounds, thirty feet on a wharf. It was raised to his shoulder, and he walked the thirty feet. Said he did not breathe while the anchor was on his shoulder, and his feet burst out through his thin shoes, which were new. This was all the harm done. He gained the bet, and lived until he was 97 years old.

BARZILLAI MOSHER, of James and Lydia, married Margaret Harvie, and had Barzillai, James, Archibald, Nicholas, Lydia, Joseph, Amy, John, Agnes, and Margaret. The above Barzillai (of Barzillai) was a sea-captain. He was lost at sea, and nothing was ever heard of him or any of the crew. JOHN was also a sea-captain, and died in Windsor, N. S.

LYDIA MOSHER, of James and Lydia, married John Densmore, of Noel, Hants Co., the offspring being John, James, Frank, Mary, Samuel, Nicholas, Jenny, Olive, Letitia, Lydia, and Amy. Jenny married John Anthony, of the above John Anthony; Olive married Nicholas Harvie, son of the above Archibald and Amy; Letitia married Samuel Densmore, known as Deacon Sam; Mary married Robert Greeno; Lydia married John Densmore, at the head of the Marsh; Amy married Samuel Densmore, known as Sleepy Sam.

ALLEN MOSHER, of James and Lydia, married Esther Wilcox, of Kempt. He had a large piece of land, and settled down to farming. They had the following children :—Jehu, Robert, Wilcox, Fanny, Polly, Simon, Amy, Benjamin, Rebecca, Allen, and Lydia, and three died young. Total, 14. The above went by the name of the Kempt Moshers.

NICHOLAS MOSHER, of James and Lydia, married Polly Greeno, who was a daughter of Daniel Greeno, who came from Rhode Island with his brother Moses. Nicholas and Polly had fifteen children—Jehu, Rachel, Mary, James, Amy, Abigail, Lydia, Olive, Nicholas, Tonge, George, Daniel, John A., Elizabeth and Sarah.

JOSEPH MOSHER, of Jas. and Lydia, married Priscilla Greeno, and had the following children: James, Barzillai, Daniel, Elizabeth, Nicholas, Joseph, Mary, William, Amy and George.

GEORGE MOSHER, of James and Lydia, (he being of the sixth generation), married Margaret Thompson and had the following children :—William, Lydia, Cyrus, Eliza, Darius, Ira, Nicholas, James and Margaret.

DELIVERANCE MOSHER, of James and Lydia, married John Macumber, their family being as follows :—Ichabod, Nicholas, Girden, Stephen, Jehu M., Michael, Deliverance, Lydia, Susannah and Sarah.

RHODA MOSHER, of James and Lydia, married Simon Ward, and had the following children :—James, Robert, Increase, Sarah, Mary, Martha, John, Margaret, Lucy and Susannah.

ELIZABETH MOSHER, of James and Lydia, married James Constantine. They had six of a family :—Pharoz, William, James, Catherine, Elizabeth and Rhoda.

The above Nicholas and Polly lived on a farm owned by their Father James, bounded East by the Township line between Newport and Douglas, North by the Kennetcook River, over a mile from Township line west, thence Southerly to base line, so called, over a mile, thence to Township line, making over a mile square, and a river running from Rawdon down through centre of farm, emptying into the Kennetcook River. The said Nicholas was a carpenter and a very persevering mechanic. He took a contract to build a vessel, which was constructed a quarter of a mile up from the mouth of the little river, and was superintended by John Corney, and launched into said river about 1807. Was sloop-rigged, carried a square topsail, and was sailed for a time by a stranger, afterward by Captain Barzillai Mosher (of the above Barzillai), of the sixth generation. This vessel carried plaster from Newport to Philadelphia, with a capacity of about 60 tons. After a time was sold. She was the first vessel built in Newport, Hants County, N. S. The above farm was willed to Nicholas and Joseph Mosher, sons of James. They died, and were buried a few rods from the little river opposite where the sloop was built, with others. The farm was sold to strangers, not any of the name living on it now, (but near by). Joseph Mosher, of James, was a carpenter and hewer of timber. He used a broad-axe eleven inches wide on the bit, and weighed eleven pounds. I am told that some men in that day used axes weighing thirteen pounds. Joseph and family lived on the farm willed to Nicholas and Joseph. There were two old houses on it, but very little land cleared, and Joseph got tired of hewing and working around by the day to maintain a family; and as he concluded that the farm was not large enough for two large families, he went up to the head of Kennetcook River, took up land and chopped a field (it being all woods), built a house out of round logs, and covered the roof with spruce bark, gathered moss and caulked the cracks between the logs, and moved his family in. Burnt off the chopping, cleared off the stuff remaining and burnt it; then sowed wheat and barley; had no team, covered the grain with a hack. This hack was made like a three-tined fork, with about four inches of the tines turned down so as to form a three-toothed rake, with which he raked the ground so as to cover the grain; and planted potatoes dropped on the ground two and a half feet apart, and with a hoe called a grub hoe hoed the ground up on to the potatoes, covering a certain depth. This formed the hill. Then after potatoes came up hoed dirt around again, and by this means raised a great crop of potatoes. After he got the grain gathered and threshed a trouble came to him to get it ground, as there was no mill nearer than eight miles through the woods to Noel, and only a path blazed out, and no road. The way he got the grain to mill was to get about one and a half bushels in two bags, making three bushels in all; put one bag on his shoulder and carried about half a mile, then laid it on a stump and went back for the other bag, carried it a half mile past where he left the first, hung it on a tree, and called it resting while he walked back to where he had left the other bag. Then took that on his shoulder and carried past the other bag half a mile, and hung it up, and repeated the process until he reached the mill. Now the readers will see the distance travelled to get the flour home, carrying flour the same way ; but in winter he had a toboggan, and if snow was deep, would put on snowshoes, and draw quite a grist to mill. The barley he hulled in a mortar, with which soup was made. The mortar he made by taking a hardwood log three feet long and eighteen inches over, hacked and cut with such tools as he had at the end, then made a fire of short, dry wood in the hole, keeping a wet cloth around the edge while burning it ; then chiselled and cut, then burned, and so on, until he got a hole twelve inches over and fifteen inches or more deep, and scraped clean. The mortar was then complete. The lower end of the pestle was made to fit the bottom of the mortar, and a hole bored through it, say, eighteen inches from lower end, into which a long handle was fitted to use with both hands. He would then get up on a block, put some barley in the mortar, and pound away until he got the hulls separated from the barley. This he would do in the evening, and next day would have a nice dish of barley soup. As soon as the neighbours heard of the mortar, they would get a little bag of barley and go over to Uncle Joe's (as they called him) in the evening, and they would pound out their grist and have a pot of soup next day. In this way he got a job of making several mortars. Neighbours were scarce. A Mr. Ryan and a Mr. Lahey lived, with their families, on the next farms each way from him. Mr. Ryan had a daughter Jenny, and Daniel Mosher, of Joseph, married her. Mr. Lahey had a daughter Rachel, and she married and had a daughter Harriet, who is the wife of the writer. All went well for a time. The older boys helped to farm and worked out, some to get clothes and shoes, and save provision at home. Joseph himself hired out at times for neighbours and friends. All did the best they could, until Priscilla (Joe's wife) got sick. There was no doctor nearer than Newport, no ploughed road, and no waggon to drive, if they could. So they concluded to make a machine like a bier. The poles were long and tapered at the ends, so as to go into a stirrup of a saddle; boards were nailed across the centre of the poles, and a box made on it to admit of a bed. The sick woman was put in the bed, the handles placed through the stirrups of forward horse, the other end through the stirrups of the hind horse's saddle, and a man on each saddle to guide the horses and steady the bed. Elizabeth rode behind the last man to wait on her mother, and in this way she was carried down to the house she had moved from. The distance was about twenty-three miles, but the mother was so far gone with consumption, that the doctor could do nothing for her, and she died April 17th, 1813. Joseph broke up housekeeping after she died. The children got scattered. George, the youngest, was only a little over five years old. The old mill in Noel failed to grind, and Mr. Densmore had it removed and commenced to erect a new mill in the fall. Jehu Mosher, of Nicholas, was the millwright. The writer's father went with him to serve his time before his mother died. They got the mill well under way, and they agreed with a man at Mount Denson, in Township of Falmouth, to make the stones, there being no stone of the right grit nearer, and he was to deliver at Mitchener's point, at the mouth of Avon River, on the beach, a little below high-water. He did so, and left the stones standing on edge with a pole run through the eyes of the stones, so a boat could come and get them. John Densmore was to send for them ; but, it being late, cold weather set in, the ice made around the stones and pole so great a cake, that in March a southerly storm and high tide came which lifted the cake of ice and stones, and the wind drove them out into Minas Basin. Then wind and tide shifted, and drove the field of ice up the Bay, and forced the ice and stones into Noel Bay, and ashore in the mouth of Noel River, and there remained until the April sun thawed away the ice from the stones. Some party being out to see if there was a chance to get the boat off to go for the stones, to his great surprise saw the stones standing on edge, with the pole through the eyes, as they were left off Mitchener's Point, not one and a half miles from the mill. They were soon hauled to the mill and put in place. The old women concluded the Lord knew they had been suffering for bread all winter, and had sent the stones in this mysterious manner fully one month before they could have got them in any other way, being fifty miles by land and thirty by water from Mitchener's Point, and dare not risk an open boat across the Bay before the last of April. Then, when the mill was ready,—Joseph Mosher had given up housekeeping, and their children scattered,—they concluded to send for him, (as he was a miller), and he went and got the mill to work. The women concluded that was a God-send to have a good miller, and the barley mortar was set aside in Noel, and at the head of Kennetcook River, as people there had to carry the grain in the same way as Joseph did, but hulled it in the mill. They also rejoiced with their Noel friends and vicinity, and for a long time talked of Providence sending the stones in such a mysterious manner, and also of getting the miller. He taught the son John the trade of grinding, and after the old man, Joseph, came away, John went by the name of miller John Densmore, as long as he lived, there being other Johns. Joseph came to Newport, lived with his son Barzillai a while, then with his son James for a time, then came and lived with his son Joseph. After a few years he took the bowel or summer complaint, and only lived three days. He had always enjoyed good health. He died August 19th, 1859, aged 90 years, 10 months and 5 days.

The above narrative I write to let the young generations know of the hardships their ancestors had to endure in the settling of this new country.

THE SEVENTH GENERATION.

JEHU MOSHER, of Jehu, married Mary Burgess, and had the following children :—Silas, Sarah, John Edward, Ann, Hannah Jane, Matilda, Jehu Allen, and Ezekiel.

Nicholas Mosher, of George, was a ship-builder. He built many good vessels. The ship "Jenny Lind," the first full-rigged ship built and rigged out in Hants Co. ; also the barque "Moro Castle," sailed for a time by Capt. James Mosher, ran as a packet carrying goods between London, G. B., and Halifax. Then sailed by Capt. Geo. Mounce for a time, who was very successful. The above Ira Mosher moved up from St. John to Avondale, to join his brother Nicholas in ship-building. They launched the ship "Jenny Lind," and Ira went down in her to St. John, where she loaded. While there a ship came from Europe with many passengers, with ship fever on board. The vessel was quarantined. Many of the passengers died, and it is said that many were buried not a foot below the surface. When warm weather came, a friend of Ira's invited him to go out, and, as it was a short cut to cross this burial-ground, he went that way. He said the smell was dreadful while they crossed. He soon came home, took sick, and died in a few days. He and others believed the trip across the grounds caused his death. The above John Andrew, of Margaret, got the shipyard from his uncle Nicholas, and was a clever builder. He constructed many fine ships, and was always ready to adopt the latest improvements, and stood high as a citizen and ship-builder in the estimation of the public. He died of heart disease, aged 47 years. His brother-in-law was a partner with him. He (William H. Mosher) continued the business, and is noted for the building of fine vessels.

The above George Mosher had a farm within two miles of the place where his father landed, which was bounded on the north by the Kennetcook River. He had a large shop; was a wheelwright and general carpenter; kept several carpenters employed; ran a blacksmith shop to iron the work; had a number of apprentices; built the first waggon that was in the county, and his son Darius drove it, as he was a helper on the farm. It was rigged to be drawn by oxen or horses. Previous to this all used carts. The said Darius lives on the farm now, is hale and hearty, and was 90 years old the 7th day of March, 1891. After a time George built small waggons to ride in to church. Also superintended the construction of King's College, Windsor.

GREENO FAMILY.

MOSES GREENO AND WIFE emigrated to this country about the time James Mosher and family came to Newport. His brother Daniel also came about this time. He married Elizabeth Wheeden, by whom he had one son, William. This son married Sarah Burgess, and had several children. He met his death in a very sudden and painful manner while attending a grist mill on Kempt Shore. In some way his coat caught in the cog wheel, and he was drawn into the wheels and instantly killed. Daniel's wife dying, he married a Miss Steel, and had eleven children:—Allen, Samuel, Moses, Major, Robert, Elizabeth, Hannah, Abigail, Sarah, Priscilla and Polly (or Mary).

Previous to the departure of Moses and Daniel from Rhode Island, the Indians were very troublesome. The Greeno brothers and others were sent by the authorities to Lake George, in the State of New York, to watch the Indians. While there in 1759, a friend of theirs, Asa Corillis, made a powder horn, upon which were engraved representations of beasts, birds, etc., together with the date, 1759, and his name. Daniel brought the horn to Nova Scotia with him. It came to Robert, and after the death of Robert and his sons it was given to the writer, as a keepsake, by Mary, Robert's widow, so I am the owner of the horn at this date, June, 1891.

Annie married John Burgess, at the mouth of the Kennetcook River, north side, and had Mary and other children. Mary married Jehu Mosher (of Jehu). Alice married Ezekiel Marsters, of the above place. One son, Daniel, is now living. He is 87 years old. The above John Anthony died March 31st, 1808.

SHIPBUILDING.

THE first vessel built in Nova Scotia was built at Little Harbor, Kelly's Cove, Yarmouth Co., in 1764. The anchors were forged at that place by Mr. Neal, a German. The vessel registered 18 tons. Another shallop was built at Fish Point, Yarmouth Co., the same year.

The first vessel of much size (after N. Mosher built the sloop) in Newport was built at the mouth of Kennetcook River, on Card's Beach, by Job Card and sons, in 1819. Her construction was superintended by Robert Knight, of Maine, U. S. She was brig rigged; was named the "Commerce," and was sailed by the Card boys.

The first vessel built at Newport Landing (now called Avondale) was the brig "Hiram," for Capt. Sweet. Her building was superintended by master builder Hallett, of Maine. She was launched in 1826, and was lost December 24th, 1831, while coming into the bay from the West Indies. It was during a terribly cold time, and the vessel got iced up so that she was unmanageable. She went ashore at Gulliver's Hole, near Digby. Capt. Jas. Liswell was master, and Capt. Sinclair chief mate. They were both drowned, with two others, when trying to get ashore. John Liswell, a brother of the captain, and John Lockhart got ashore safely.

In April, 1845, John Liswell was master of the brig "Leone." He was said to be a smart man. His vessel was last seen beating out the South Channel while bound to New York from Windsor. The brig and all hands, eight in number, all from Newport, were never heard of again. Capt James W. Liswell, now master of the barque "Mark Curry," is the only son of the late Capt. John Liswell.
